World's Oldest Haggadah Discovered in Cairo

In 1859, Jacob Saphir set out from Jerusalem on a world tour. His journey led him to the 1200-year-old Ben Ezra Synagogue outside Cairo. There, in an underground room, he discovered the Cairo Genizah, a repository of thousands of abandoned Jewish papers, scrolls and books. Among the piles was an ancient haggadah written on parchment. Today it is housed in the library of New York's Jewish Theological Seminary.

Why is this Manicure Different from All Others?

There is no end to innovative Passover customs. After you clean your house and work your fingers to the bone, you can give them a "facelift" with Ten Plagues Nail Decals. It will be a manicure different from all others!

Spring Cleaning at the Western Wall

If you think your pre-Passover cleaning is an unwieldy task, it doesn't come anywhere near the massive clean-up job performed every year before Passover at Jerusalem's Western Wall. Six months' worth of notes tucked into the Wall's cracks are removed and transferred to the Mount of Olives, where they are stored in a Genizah with religious texts.

A Tapestry of Jewish Faces

April is Celebrate Diversity Month

Diversity is part of the Jewish DNA. With Jews living all over the world, there is no one Jewish look, but a tapestry of faces with different skin tones, eye colors, and hair colors. Add to that the numerous customs from all over the world that are woven into the fabric of Jewish tradition, and you have a sense of its kaleidoscopic diversity.

Assaf's Matzah Brei Pancake

Ingredients

6 eggs
3 matzahs
Salt and pepper, to taste
Olive oil

Optional: milk, mushrooms, any vegetable you want to add

Preparation

Crack eggs into a mixing bowl and whisk. Break the matzahs into small pieces and add to the eggs. Season with salt and pepper and whisk. Heat oil in a large frying pan. Pour in the egg mix, gently shake the pan until the mix looks like a large pancake, and serve.

Recipe courtesy of Assaf Cohen, who learned to make this Passover delight from his Jewish-Egyptian mother.
